CIVIC CENTRE FOR UPLIFT
MOVEMENTS DEDICATED TODAY

Building Designed Primarily for Public Speaking Auditorium Wider Than It Is Long Architecture Severely Plain A Civic Dedication on Monday.

The Ethical Culture Society, which was established in 1876 by Felix Adler with the purpose of founding a school of higher ethics and morals, will dedicate today its new meeting house at Central Park West and Sixty-fourth street. This will be the first meeting held in its new home, all weekly meetings for the last seventeen years having been held in Carnegie Hall. The dedication services today are open to members of the society only. The civic dedication, open to the public, is to be held to-morrow.

The exercises to-day will consist of addresses by Prof. Edwin R. Seligman, president of the society, who will speak in behalf of the trustees; Dr. Felix Adler, William F. Salter, Dr. John L. Elliott, S. Burns Weston and Robert Moore. The dedication ode is to be delivered by Percival Chubb. At the civic dedication the Mayor will be represented by President McNulty, who will be the first speaker. The other speakers include Dr. Lyman Abbott, Edward M. Shannard, Isaac S. Seligman and Dr. Henry Moskowitz. The celebration will close with a dinner on Tuesday evening and with exercises in the Ethical Culture school in the adjoining building on Wednesday.

Dr. Adler said yesterday of the purpose to which the building was to be put:

"The purpose is to render to the city a new civic centre for the promotion of upright movements. The meeting house is not to be used for the purpose of direct propaganda, but rather for the purpose of all questions of the day may be discussed, not in favor of special interests nor in high passion but in their bearing on the progress of society as a whole."

"The building will not be given over to political mass meetings, but is to be a place for the discussions of the day in the light of the great principles of life, a place where such questions may be taken up from a larger point of view, not from the aspect of their momentary importance, but from the broader ethical point of view. No wish it to be understood that our building, just as Carnegie Hall was before we moved, is a disposal of all who wish to meet for the consideration of movements in which there is a serious uplift."

Thirty-three years ago, when the society was one year old, we had the opportunity to take possession of a building of our own, but we declined on the ground that such a step was not of first importance. We did not wish our ideas to seek premature expression in brick and mortar. The new building is an architectural expression of the society's teachings and as such it is a more appropriate place for our gatherings. It is a temple, the only building in New York designed primarily for public speaking."

Three hundred thousand dollars contributed by members of the society has been expended on the building. It is built of Indiana limestone, and the plan of it makes it stand out in contrast with the surrounding buildings. Although the east side faces on Central Park, that facade has been left entirely bare, with the exception of windows on the two upper floors. The entrance is on Sixty-fourth street only. This facade is pierced by three high windows, the only natural illumination for the auditorium. These windows, which will eventually be entirely of stained glass, throw light directly upon the speaker, but not in the eyes of the audience. The general style of the structure is an adaptation from the Byzantine type of the Byzantine period.

Unlike the usual church structure, this meeting hall has no pews, but is a hall with a large chandelier. Stairways lead up from the foyer to the auditorium. A relief to the plainness of the walls is discovered in the stained glass windows on the north. It is in memory of Alfred R. Wolf and bears the inscription: "For Asper and Astra." The basement of the building is fitted up for an assembly room and can also be used for banquets. The two upper floors contain the administrative offices for the society and clubrooms. Robert D. Kohn, a member of the society, is the architect.

JAMES E. GAFFNEY DENIES

And the Graft Hunting Committee Adjourns to Meet After Election

The legislative graft committee wound up its hunt until after election yesterday in a short session at which James E. Gaffney, John Murphy's partner in the New York Contracting Company, made a voluntary statement about his connection with the bribery fund alleged to have been distributed to defeat the race-track bill.

"I read in the papers," said the undersigned Mr. Gaffney, "that according to the testimony of Assistant District Attorney H. L. Gardner, a man named Gardner said that I had handled part of a fund to influence legislation against race-track gambling. If Mr. Gardner said that to Elder Mr. Gardner is a liar. I didn't know anything about any money at all. If Mr. Gardner were in the room now I wouldn't know him, and if he said that he is a liar."

"Did you ever give Senator Grady $1,000?" queried Senator Wagner from among the uncommitted.

"I never even gave a cent," snapped back Mr. Gaffney.

"Have you ever given any legislative money to have you any interest in any race-track property?"

"Not a cent," said the witness, leaving the stand as Counsel Bruce said that he would not examine.

Then Chairman Merritt made the following statement:

"Is several members of this committee are candidates for office, and as they are certain things to their constituents, their party and their friends, and themselves, there will be no further public hearings until November 16, although the work of the committee will proceed in the meanwhile."

ARMY COURT-MARTIAL CASES.

Col. G. F. Cooke, Capt. Guy H. B. Smith and Chaplain J. E. Dallam Involved.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Three important army court-martial cases will be acted upon by President Taft within the next few weeks. They are those of Col. George F. Cooke, retired; Capt. Guy H. B. Smith, Fourth Infantry; and Chaplain John E. Dallam, Twelfth Infantry.

Col. Cooke was recently tried at Vancouver Barracks, Washington, on a charge of being responsible for the theft by a non-commissioned officer of about $2,000 while he was Lieutenant-Colonel of the Twenty-second Infantry, which was stationed in Alaska. Capt. Smith was tried by a secret court-martial at Fort Leavenworth for an offense while a passenger on a Pacific transport on which his regiment was returning from the Philippines. The details of the charge against him have not been made public.

Chaplain Dallam has been a cause of worry to officers of the War Department for some months. At first he changed his religion from Episcopalian to Unitarian. Later he criticized a brother officer, for which he was court-martialed and reprimanded by Major-General William P. Duval commanding the Philippine division. Chaplain Dallam next wrote a letter to a Manila newspaper criticizing the result of his court-martial trial. He was again ordered before a court-martial. The record in the second trial is now before the President.

President Talks to Steel Men.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—President Taft made a brief speech this morning to a delegation of steel manufacturers, both American and foreign, who have been holding conferences in the United States on the state of the industry. The speech was informal and dealt with the remarkable growth of the steel business. The visitors were presented by Judge E. H. Gary. They called merely to pay respects.

BLOWUP IN HOTEL BASEMENT.

Six Men Hurt When Hot Water Tank in the Basement of the Clarendon Hotel, Washington and Johnson streets, Brooklyn, about 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning exploded, blowing up a large slice of the concrete floor between the engine room and the restaurant on the Fulton street side, sending chairs and tables flying and shattering the glassware and windows.

The entire electrical service of the hotel was put out of operation, and the 200 guests, nearly all of whom were still in their rooms upstairs, had to make their way down without the aid of the elevator. There was no panic among them and none was injured.

Of the six men hurt five were in the boiler room when the tank exploded. Robert Bradine, 30 years old, assistant engineer, was scalded on the arms and body, had his left leg broken and his face cut and suffered internal injuries. Charles George, 25 years old, fireman, was scalded on the legs and arms and his left knee cap broken and his face gashed. Both were taken to the Cumberland Street Hospital. Edwin Anderson, 28 years, assistant engineer, was severely scalded and was taken to the Brooklyn Hospital. Nelson Asher, the chief engineer, was not in the engine room when the explosion occurred, but directly after it he made his way through the hot vapors to cut off the steam and had his hands and face slightly scalded. Walter Asher, his son, an electrician, also escaped with slight injuries. Robert Pearce, 30 years old, a waiter, who was in the restaurant when the floor was blown up, got a gash in his right leg. John Hatton, an insurance man, was the solitary guest in the restaurant when the floor was blown up, and although thrown to the floor and knocked about he escaped without injury. The guests were served with breakfast in the two front dining rooms.

Handsome New $55 Russian Ponyskin
Coats for a Favored Few, $37.50

A VALUE absolutely unprecedented in fur coat selling, because these coats are the best $55.00 Coats we have seen in several seasons.

Unexpected, too—the coats came to us from a maker who was heavily stocked with skins and could not wait for cold weather—was forced to seek an early market—and found it here—gave us the coats at the August cost of the skins.

50 and 52 inches long, made of handsomely moired skins with a deep, rich lustre. The tailoring shows the best work of skilled men, and the model is the conservative semi-fitted style, with shawl collar and turn back cuffs. Silk brocade lining all through. Extraordinary value at $37.50.

Russian Ponyskin Coats,
$115.00 Value, at $75.00

The skins from which we had these coats made are as fine a collection as we ever secured. In fact we are surprised we did not have to pay a much higher price for them. To say they are glossy doesn't begin to describe their sleek beauty. Good Pony Skins are never heavy or shaggy.

52 inches long, beautifully marked XXXX quality skins; very glossy and wavy; selected for their superior appearance and light weight. Large, rolling collar, jewelled buttons, brocade satin linings. Very smartly tailored. Women's and misses' sizes. Made to sell at $115.00—special to-morrow, $75.00.

$100.00 Near-Seal Coats, $78.50

52 inches long, with large rolling collar; lined with brocade satin; jewelled buttons.

Long and Short Fur Coats

For afternoon and evening wear the long coat is indispensable to cover delicate costumes. We are showing these long coats in picturesque models and attractive combinations of furs—Seal with Ermine, Ermine with Mole, Seal with white moire Caracul, Seal or Caracul with Skunk, and many others; also handsome plain coats in Sable, Mink, Ermine, Mole, Seal, Broadtail and Persian Lamb.

For morning wear and with walking costumes there is an increasing preference for the short coat. An attractive model is trimmed with very broad silk braid arranged to fall over the skirt.

Revillon coats, whatever the model or material, are characterized by very light weight, graceful and becoming lines, perfect fit, trimmings of the highest quality and exquisite finish in every detail.

We have just received some coats and sets from Paris which show decidedly new features.

These are now on exhibition in our showrooms.
